Engage
the Conversations That Matter

Change begins with conversation

When simplified - issues, passions, and things that matter become very present and alive to you – from the soul. They often become much bigger than you.

Change begins with conversation. Conversation is the natural way humans think together. However, conversation is an activity of relationship.

We so often engage conversations without engaging even our relationship.

Conversations that matter come from the alignment of being present, telling the truth, keeping it simple, and the intimate and ultimate relationships.

Without this alignment its just a chat.

Note: "conversation" is used here metaphorically as well - its about the doing. Sometimes its doing the action that needs to happen.
